

Revised February 2022

How income affects your Medicare drug coverage premiums

You could pay a higher monthly premium for Medicare drug coverage (Part D) depending on your income. This includes Part D coverage you get from a Medicare drug plan, a Medicare Advantage Plan with drug coverage, or a Medicare Cost Plan that includes drug coverage. This is true even if your drug coverage is through your employer. If your modified adjusted gross income as reported on your IRS tax return from 2 years ago (the most recent tax return information the IRS has shared with Social Security) is more than $91,000 (individuals and married individuals filing separately) or $182,000 (married individuals filing jointly), you'll have to pay extra for your drug coverage. This extra amount is called the income-related monthly adjustment amount. You'll have to pay this extra amount in addition to your monthly Part D plan premium.

Who will have to pay the extra amount?

Less than 5% of all people with Medicare have to pay the extra amount. This means most people will continue to pay only their plan's Part D premium their plan charges in 2022. If you have to pay the extra amount in addition to your Part D plan premium, Social Security will use your reported IRS income to determine how much extra you have to pay. You'll get a letter from Social Security if you have to pay an extra amount in addition to your monthly Part D plan premium. The chart below shows the amount you'll have to pay each month, depending on your income.

If your filing status and yearly income in 2020 was

How will Medicare collect the extra amount?

The extra amount will be deducted from your monthly Social Security, Railroad Retirement, or Office of Personnel Management check, no matter how you usually pay your plan premium. If you don't get any of these benefits or the extra amount is more than the amount of your check, you'll get a monthly bill from Medicare (or the Railroad Retirement Board (RRB), if you're a railroad retiree). Medicare starts sending these bills in December for the next year.

Note: You might get your bill after January. If you get a bill after January, you'll have to pay the extra amount for more than one month at one time.

Important: If you get a bill, you must pay the extra amount to Medicare (or the RRB) to keep your Part D coverage. Don't send the extra amount to your plan.

What should I do if I disagree with the decision?

Social Security will send you a letter if your Medicare drug plan premium will change based on your income. This letter will tell you what to do if you disagree. For more information, call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213. TTY users can call 1-800-325-0778.

What if my income changes?

If your income significantly changes, call Social Security. Let them know you have new information and may need a new decision about the extra amount you'll be charged each month. Your income may have changed due to any of these reasons:

- You married, divorced, or your marriage was annulled
- You became a widow/widower
- You or your spouse stopped working or reduced work hours
- You or your spouse lost income from income-producing property due to a disaster or other event beyond your control
- You or your spouse's employer pension plan was reorganized, terminated, or experienced a scheduled cessation
- You or your spouse got a settlement from an employer or former employer because of the employer's closure, bankruptcy, or reorganization

Do I have to pay this extra amount?

You must pay both the extra amount and your plan's premium each month to keep your Medicare drug coverage.
